

WEATHER for Kentucky
Tuesday fair

HOPKINSVILLE KENTUCKY, TUESDAY, APRIL 2, 1917.

VOL. 39 - No. 40

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

If we must fight Germany, shows us the Hessians.

Austria has broadly intimated that she wants peace. Count Czernin, foreign minister, says the peace offer still holds good.

Gov. Stanley appeals to newspapers to censor their own columns and not publish any military information that would be news to an enemy.

Seventy rebel prisoners taken during Villa's attempt to capture Chihuahua city Friday, were publicly hanged Saturday as a warning to the Villa element of the population.

Henderson county is entitled to the credit of opening the first tuberculosis sanatorium in Western Kentucky. Gov. Stanley formally opened it Saturday. Christian county will have one some day.

A Copenhagen dispatch says Germany, according to information from Berlin, now is gathering to the colors every available man for a supreme military effort to bring the war to a victorious conclusion in this year's campaign.

Eli H. Redman, one of the men convicted in connection with the alleged election conspiracy at Terre Haute, Indiana, died at Leavenworth, Kan. in the Federal penitentiary, where he was serving a five-year sentence. He formerly was circuit judge.

Orders are being prepared calling out additional guard forces in several eastern States. They contemplated an increase of at least two regiments of infantry to the 50,000 guardsmen already added to the federal service for police protection work.

The members of the General Assembly will prolong their wranglings over one subject until April 25, when their pay will be stopped and they will reluctantly go home, and some of the time-killers will have the nerve to want to be re-elected.

The senate adopted a resolution requesting that the state superintendent of schools secure flags for all school houses in Kentucky, and direct that the flags be hoisted with appropriate patriotic exercises. The teachers also are directed to give the pupils some character of military drill each day.

A new German raider, called the See Adler, is at large off the coast of Brazil and has sunk eleven British and French vessels, 7 of them sailing freighters laden with grain. The captured crews were put aboard a French bark and 285 men sent to Rio Janeiro. The depredations reported occurred nearly a month ago.

Lady Walnut Hill, a White Leghorn, 707, laid her eighty-sixth egg on consecutive days at 7:45 o'clock Sunday morning. This gives her a margin of four days over the former world's record established by Lady Show You, in the Mountain Grove, Mo. contest in 1914. The little pullet weighs only 3½ pounds. Her eggs average 1.8 ounces. She is owned by Dr. R. L. Ireland, of Louisville.

Private subscriptions of $67.50 have been made by 35 enterprising citizens of Princeton in sums of from 50 cents to $5.00, to repair the "Hopkinsville pike" leading towards this city. In the appeal for aid the committee said: "This work is especially valuable just at this time, since a good road to join the new road to Hopkinsville will give to citizens of Caldwell county access to the Dixie Highway, the Dixie Bee Line Highway and the Jackson Highway."

Great fears are felt for the future safety of a well-known citizen of Hopkinsville, who sometimes visits Paducah. The following dispatch appeared Saturday: "Orders were issued by Chief of Police Graham today backed by Police Judge Caswell Crossland, to arrest any person heard making unAmerican remarks or abusing the President and government. Bulletins were issued instructing private citizens to report such remarks to police."

HOUSE PROMPTLY CHOSE CHAMP CLARK SPEAKER

Democrat Is Re-elected Speaker Early In the Afternoon.

WAR RESOLUTION SURE

Will Have Large Majorities in Both Houses, Despite the Pacifist Opposition.

Washington, April 2.—Congress, called in extraordinary session by President Wilson, met to-day to determine the most important issues before the legislative representatives of the people of the United States since the civil war. It is considered a foregone conclusion that it either will declare war against Germany, or declare a state of war exists because of Germany's aggressions on the high seas.

President Wilson has completed the message he will deliver to congress and is ready to address a joint session as soon as he gets word that both houses have been organized and are ready to hear him.

Either before or directly after he addresses congress the president is expected to confer with leaders of both houses regarding the specific legislation desired by the administration. The war and navy departments continued today their preliminary preparedness measures and are ready with recommendations for further strengthening the army and navy, to be submitted as soon as congress decides whether the nation is actually to go to war with Germany.

Both houses met at noon. The senate, already organized, was ready to transact business when the gravel fell.

The House lost no time in organizing, Champ Clark being re-elected speaker on the first ballot, with several votes to spare. Four Republican members were absent.

President Wilson appeared before the joint session at three o'clock and delivered the message he had prepared.

Masonic Mutual Life Association.

T. J. Adams, of Louisville, is given additional honor by members of the Masonic fraternity of his election to the directorate of the Masonic Mutual Life Association of Washington, D. C., following his nomination made at the fifty-first annual meeting of the board. The Kentucky members of the association are greatly pleased with the outcome of the election and are planning a big increase in membership to celebrate his official connection.

Mr. Adams is now on his way to Washington to attend the regular meeting of the board and to plan for the extension of the work of the association in Kentucky by bringing to the fraternity of the state a better knowledge of the association and its work and the advantages enjoyed by its membership.

Mr. Adams is superintendent of the Masonic Widows and Orphans' Home in Louisville, a Shriner, a Knight Templar and Past Grand Master of Kentucky.

LABOR SCARCE.

There were several good days for gardening last week, but many citizens failed to get their gardens planted on account of the scarcity of day laborers doing such work. Northern labor agents, turnpike contractors and heavy work in the tobacco houses have all helped to make labor scarce.

SHIELDING SHADOW ENDS.

"The Shielding Shadow," one of the most popular serials Manager Stockley has ever put on reached the fifteenth and final chapter at the Rex Saturday. Sebastian Navarro brought to bay by pursuers leaped to his death from a precipice, Ravenger proved to be Carson come to life who forced Navarro to sign a statement clearing his name after which he permitted him to escape, only to be pursued to his death. Carson told how he escaped from the octopus, by cutting himself loose with his knife under water and escaping. Of course he married Leontine, Sebastian's wife in name only, released by his death. "The Silent Menace," a new serial started.

The Executive Committee of the K. P. A., will meet at Lexington April 13.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Louisville Methodist Conference ended its annual meeting Friday night and selected Leitchfield as the place of the 1918 session. A resolution was adopted inviting the General Council of the Southern Methodist Women's organizations to meet in Leitchfield next year.

MRS. M. F. FAXON PASSES AWAY

Long Illness Relieved by Death
At Cedar Hill, Tenn.,
Sunday.

Mrs. Martha Francis Faxon died at her home in Cedar Hill, Tenn., at an early hour Sunday morning, after a lingering illness of cancer. She formerly resided in this city and was 53 years old. Her many friends in this city will learn with sincere regret of her demise. The remains were brought here Sunday night and the interment took place in Riverside Cemetery yesterday afternoon.

MRS. WEST'S CONDITION.

Mrs. Dr. N. S. West, wife of the dentist and a daughter of the late Mrs. J. D. Hill, who was struck by an automobile Friday, is recovering from her injuries, which were mostly bruises and a cut on her head. The machine was driven by Mr. Jas. B. Thweatt, and the accident was apparently unavoidable. Mr. Thweatt stopped the car just in time and Hugh Phelps, who saw the accident, pulled Mrs. West from under the car. Her hat was demolished by the wheel.

LITTLE GIRL BURNED.

Virginia Bell Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Johnson's little seven-year-old daughter, was seriously burned Friday night. She went into the kitchen and accidentally ran against the cook, who had a kettle of boiling water in her hand, and some of the liquid was thrown and struck the child's face, neck and arm, painfully scalding her. She is doing as well as could be expected.

Dry Bill Is Beaten.

Springfield, Ill., April 1.—By a vote of 80 to 67 a bill for a State-wide referendum on prohibition in Illinois in 1918 was defeated by the House of Representatives.

Twin Brothers Die.

George and Jack Hilton, twin brothers of Bullitt county, aged 21, died of typhoid fever, two days apart.

FOR DAVIS MONUMENT

Hopkinsville Business Men and Daughters of Confederacy To Take Part.

It is earnestly desired that every member of the committee named a few days ago, for the purpose of devising plans to help build this beautiful obelisk, will be present at the luncheon to-day, noon, at the Avalon. The Daughters of the Confederacy are making extensive preparations for an appetizing menu, and hope no regrets will be sent in. This committee of business men of the city and county will try to raise sufficient funds from the people of the city and county show the civic and commercial pride that they have in this splendid endeavor. Patriotism and sentiment are all right in a way but party feeling is to be laid aside to-day and every body will help build this magnificent monument that will give Hopkinsville and Christian county and Todd county a distinction equal to the native home of Abraham Lincoln. We are proud of Mr. Lincoln's memorial. Let us make it possible to be proud of Mr. Davis' monument by contributing liberally to it.

FOR DAVIS OBELISK

Start Made Raising Funds and $500 Subscribed.

At a luncheon served to a number of business men at the Avalon Saturday a definite movement was inaugurated to raise $3,000 or more in Christian county for the 351 foot obelisk to be erected in the Jefferson Davis memorial park at Fairview. About $500 was pledged by those present and committees were named to canvass the county closely to secure the balance. Gen. Bennett H. Young, of Louisville, president of the Jefferson Davis home association, telephoned that the contract for building the obelisk was let Saturday. Work will begin at once.

That this work is now attracting wide attention, is shown by the following editorial from the Evansville Courier:

"The people of Hopkinsville are planning to raise $3,000 to $9,000 for the Jefferson Davis obelisk. They will do it, too, for in the vernacular of the street 'the Hoptown bunch are a live bunch.'"

"Evansville should do its bit towards building the monument to the confederate leader, and the local U. D. C. is best equipped to take leadership in the movement. As the people are now raising many funds for many local objects, doubtless the fund should be restricted to those who would enjoy making a small contribution. This city at least should raise $100."

"The Courier will agree to print the list of contributors and be one of them in case the local U. D. C. takes the matter up."

MRS. NANCE PARALYZED.

Mrs. Josephine Usher Nance, widow of the late B. B. Nance, of Pee Dee, was stricken with paralysis Friday, which affected her entire left side and vocal organs. On Saturday she became somewhat less disabled, her power of speech returning. Mrs. Nance is 74 years of age and the stroke makes her condition very serious. Her general health had been good, but recently she had suffered from an attack of grip.

SOUTH CAROLINA FALLS IN LINE.

Kentucky started a bigger thing than she knew when she started the campaign against illiteracy. The South Carolina Legislature has just created an illiteracy commission to stamp out illiteracy from that State. First, tried moonlight schools out in a few counties and found they could wipe out illiteracy. Now they are going at it earnest.

BRITISH KEEP UP ADVANCE

Berlin Admits Retirement Distance of 2 Miles But Says
British Losses Heavy.

FRENCH SWING FORWARD

Turks in Retreat 35 Miles
West of Bagdad—Italians Check Austrian Attacks.

The British forces in France are gradually creeping up on the important town of St. Quentin, considered one of the German strongholds. Also to the northwest of the town they are swinging their line forward at various points in a straightening out movement that is making good strides eastward.

The German war office admits that the German line for a distance of from one and a quarter to two miles was forced to give way before the British in the region bounded by the Peronne-Gouzeaucourt road and the Omignon brook, but says the British suffered heavy losses.

Artillery duels and small operations carried out by raiding parties continue on the remaining front in France and Belgium. The artillery action is especially severe on the Belgian front and in Champagne.

Comparative quiet prevails on the front in Russia and Galicia.

The London war office reports the frustration by the British of a Turkish attempt to envelop the British 35 miles west of Bagdad and says the Turks are now in full retreat.

Turkish attacks on the Caucasus front near Alma, which lies to the northeast of Erzingan, have been put down by the Russians.

NOW SIX DISTRICTS

General Wood Transferred From New York to Charleston.

By order of the President the country has been divided into six military districts to take the place of the four established for many years, and the appointment of generals to command these have interested the nation. The most important change was that of Gen. Leonard Wood, from the Department of the East to the new Department of the Southeast, a change which many of the general's friends declare is due to politics. He is to be replaced in the Department of the East by Gen. J. Franklin Bell. Gen. Clarence R. Edwards goes to the newly created northeastern Department. Gen. Hunter Liggert will command the Western Department. Gen. Thomas H. Barry will command the Central Department, and Gen. John J. Pershing will remain in charge of the Southern Department. Headquarters are at Boston, Governor's Island, Charleston, San Antonio, San Francisco and Chicago.

200 MILLIONS LOST.

The Government of the United States estimates a loss to American investors from worthless stock sold through the mails at over 200 million dollars per year. In addition to this large sum, there is at least an equal amount lost annually in securities of a similar character, traded in on many of the various smaller exchanges.

To protect their readers against these "Get Rich Quick" schemes, many leading newspapers and national magazines conduct Financial Inquiry Departments through which their readers may obtain reliable information. Banks and trust companies approve of the departments as they discourage speculation and encourage safe investments.

posed of Christian and Hopkins counties. Subject to the August primary.

The Iowa house of representatives Friday passed the joint resolution by a vote of 85 to 20 submitting to the people a constitutional amendment providing for woman's suffrage. The resolution had already passed the senate. The resolution must be voted upon again by the next legislature before it can be submitted to the people.

April is the month our wars begin.
The Revolutionary war began April 19, 1775. The Mexican war began April 24, 1846. The Black Hawk war began April 21, 1831. The Civil war began April 12, 1861. The Spanish war began April 21, 1898. Congress got ready for the War of 1812 in April also, though the declaration was held up till June. And history will probably record that the war with Germany began in April, 1917.

Measures providing for amendments of the "Bone Dry" bill have been introduced in both the Tennessee Senate and House. The Senate passed a bill authorizing the use of alcohol in educational institutions. The introduction of the measure was brought about chiefly on account of Vanderbilt University, which uses about twelve barrels of alcohol a year in its chemical laboratory. The bill introduced in the house was one permitting the use of alcohol for the manufacture of thermometrical instruments.

The Oliver bill creating the state tax commission passed the senate
Friday afternoon by the vote of 24 to 11. The senate adjourned until Monday. The bill as it passed the senate contains many changes from that which passed the house, although the main features are retained. Senator Salmon, of this district, was one of 11 senators who consistently voted against the bill. Overstreet, of Daviess, and Porter, of Webster, two other Second district men, were in the minority opposing the administration bill.

Austin Hoy, whose mother and sister were among the Americans who perished on the Laconia, has joined the British army. He becomes a member of an officers' training corps, with the rank of a cadet, and is practically assured of a commission. Hoy cabled President Wilson soon after it had been established that the Laconia sank from the unwarned attack of a German submarine demanding that the United States avenge such a deed and declaring that he would be the first American to enlist against those who had caused the death of his loved ones.

SAVING SEED
POTATOES

By Using Cones With Eyes
Three-fourths of Flesh Can Be Used for Cooking.

The cost of seeding Irish potatoes can be greatly reduced, the garden specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture point out, if, instead of using a whole potato for planting, the gardener will cut out from potatoes cone-shaped pieces of flesh, each containing an eye of the potato. In this way only from one-fourth to one-fifth of the flesh of the potato will be needed to provide seed and the remainder of the potato can be cooked for table use. These cones range from one-fifth to one-seventh of an ounce in weight, whereas, under the usual methods, the sets range from three-fourths to 2 ounces in weight. A gardener, under ordinary conditions, will get best results by using 15 to 18 bushels, or 900 to 1,080 pounds of potatoes to the acre. This method of preparing sets, therefore, should make available for table use over 675 pounds of potato flesh, which, under ordinary conditions, would be planted per acre.

To plant a plot 50 by 100 feet, or approximately one-ninth of an acre, at the same rate of seeding, would call for 1½ to 2 bushels of seed, planted in the ordinary way. The method of using the cones and eyes for seed and cooking the remainder of the flesh, therefore, becomes a "worthwhile economy even when a small area is planted."

Under this plan it is not necessary to prepare the seed all at one time.
From day to day the cones for seeding can be cut from the potatoes as they are being prepared for the table.
The cuttings then should be spread out on a piece of paper in a moderately cool room (about 50 degrees F.) and allowed to remain there until they have cured; that is, until the cut surface has become dry. A day or two should suffice for this, and potatoes then should be put in a shallow box or tray and placed where it is still cooler. Any storage condition that will insure them against frost on one hand and undue shriveling on the other should prove satisfactory.

Spring house cleaning means cleaning inside and outside. Dull pimply

Victorious But Conquered.

Victories are often purchased at great cost. Sometimes the victory becomes a defeat. What tickles the national fancy may drive men to extremes but the extremes may bring consequences little dreamed of. In the midst of the celebrations of victory the collapse of power may begin.
No nation is so dangerously near calamity as it is in the moment of its triumphs. Then it is that the bars of restraint are lowered and follies caper in the guise of festive heralds of greatness. One can't rise and by rising tamper with principles. No man can ever get above his honor and remain worthy of himself. The fact that you rise is evidence that you will need all your powers to keep you in high station.

That Boy o' Mine.

By J. G. Hallimond.

These lines were written in August, 1912. Exactly two years later, on war being declared between Great Britain and Germany, "That Boy o' Mine" was one of the first to enlist. He went with the First Canadian Contingent to Flanders, and in the Battle of Langemark, on April 24, 1915, he fell, and was officially reported as "wounded and missing." His commanding officer said: "He was the best man I had, intelligent, cool, fearless, and with plenty of common sense, and his name was about to be sent in for promotion."

I. HIS COMING

He came to me from out that mystic realm,
Where mercies generate, and love
divine;

A gift from God, my heart to overwhelm,
With gratitude and awe, that boy
o' mine.

II. HIS BABYHOOD

His tiny fingers held me in a clasp
As soft and gentle as the clinging vine;
His baby touch the adamantine grasp
That naught could sunder; oh, that boy o' mine.

III. HIS YOUTH

Through happy golden days of carefree youth
On which the sun seemed evermore
to shine,
I watched him grow in strength and
grace, and truth;
My heart exulted o'er that boy o'
mine.

IV. HIS FIGHT

Out on the world's broad battlefield
of life,
Full-panoplied upon the firing line,
He went; he fought, he won, though in the strife
My eager heart ached for that boy
o' mine.

V. CONCLUSION

Now in my age I lean upon his arm,
His strength my constant stay in life's decline;
When final shadows fall, and evening calm Surrounds me, then I'll bless that
boy o' mine.
In the belief that he still lives, and is a prisoner of war, we ask you to remember him in your prayers.
Cannot the members of the Prayer League cheer the hearts of Dr. and Mrs. Hallimond by joining their prayer and faith to theirs that their son may come safe home again.—

Humor in History.

When Laud, as chaplain to the king, reported on the religious condition of the people in Scotland, he was not aware how humorous he was. He wrote: "There is not a surplice in the country. I question if there be a tailor in the country that could cut you a decent surplice; the tradition of religion seems lost."

TO DIG FOR CROESUS' GOLD

Expedition Led by Princeton Professor Will Visit Asia Minor in Search of Riches.

Croesus, king of Lydia, and the world's first great financier, escorted a committee of his subjects through his palace one afternoon in February, 77, and after the committee had looked at Croesus' heaps of gold, one of the visitors, who was the first muckraker, evidently, said it was wicked that anyone should have so much wealth and that something was going to happen to it. It did; half an hour later most of the big mountain overhanging Sardis buried the city, and when the earthquake was over Croesus' wealth was buried below mining depth.

Prof. Howard Butler of the department of art and archaeology in Princeton university, announced recently that he was going over to Asia Minor very soon to resurrect the buried treasure. In 1909 Professor Butler headed an expedition to Sardis and, though he found only bronze statues, his excavations were of great scientific worth.

CITIZEN APPLIED THE LAW

In His Own Car Philadelphian Pursued a Reckless Motorist and Had the Man Arrested.

Does a day ever pass that you do not hear someone say, "We ought to have a law to stop that sort of thing?"

We scream for more laws, but when it comes to punishing those who fracture the laws we one and all join in the chorus, "Let George do it!"

And the trouble is, George is quite as careless as we. You see men expectorate upon the sidewalk scores of times every day, but do you report them? Never.

You see drivers threaten the lives of pedestrians with their reckless motoring, but do you take the trouble to have one arrested? Of course you don't.

And just because 999 of us are so perverse and lax in this particular, I lift my hat to Dr. A. C. Morgan. I do not personally know the doctor, but I do know that he saw a man drive in reckless fashion past a school building from which scores of children were issuing.

No, he didn't say, "Let George do it," but he did it himself. What? Why, followed the fellow in his own car and had him arrested and fined.

FASHIONED OF HUMAN SKIN

Most Remarkable Screen in the World Is That Owned by the Sultan of Turkey.

There are many priceless relics in the menage of the sultan of Turkey, most of which symbolize brutality and vice. But the romance of the famous screen in the throneroom of the sultan's palace is worth repeating.

It is made, so rumor hath it, of human skin, perfectly tanned and elaborately tooled and embossed, and it has been in the royal quarters for more than two centuries. This remarkable screen is not an evidence of cruelty or barbarity on the part of Turkey's ruler two hundred years ago, but is a memorial to twelve faithful servants of a former sultan.

At one time during a sultan's reign two hundred years ago, a wing of the palace caught fire, and during the conflagration a much-loved member of the sultan's family was rescued by twelve servants. The twelve servants perished, some of them dying later of their wounds and burns, so his majesty had their skins removed by an expert and had them preserved in this touching though remarkable manner. The screen is now looked upon as a part of the ruler's inheritance, and it is said that every sultan cherishes it as a mascot.

Living a Century.

There is a certain fascination about living a century (a fascination that easily leads to falsification). The glory of the achievement sheds luster on the remotest connections, so that there is always someone to boast of the feat, and it is one of the few ways in which any old person who can last out may bring fame to posterity.

"It ain't s' much 'at she died, doc," sobbed one old man at his mother's bedside. "She was old an' didn't know nothin' no more, an' she had to go sometime. But jes' to think, five weeks more would ha' made her a hundred! Clost' as that, an' then to have all them years o' care go for nothin'!"

Absurd, of course! As a matter of fact, there is no special reason for setting up the century post as a goal. As Prof. Irving Fisher has pointed out in his famous "Report on National Vitality," the most important dimension of life is not length, but breadth. There is little gain in the burdensome dragging of a life that is already spent.

THE KENTUCKIAN FOR 1917

EVER since the year 1868, the HOPKINSVILLE KENTUCKIAN has been published under one name or another. In 1879 the present name was given and the present management took charge of the paper, which is now in its 39th volume. For almost 40 years it has been a faithful exponent of the growth and development of the city and county. It has written in its files a history of the county covering that long period. It has recorded the birth of three generations in some instances. It has seen the small town develop into a prosperous city with its people ever looking forward to greater things.

During all these years it has had a loyal and constant patronage from the best people of the county. It has many subscribers whose names have not been off its subscription lists in 39 years. In many other families sons have taken their father's places. We would be ungrateful not to appreciate support like this, but we have never come to the reading public with a stronger appeal for patronage than this year. Conditions have greatly changed and paper stock is three times as high as a year ago.

Many newspapers have advanced rates but in order that the circulation may not be lessened by a higher price the KENTUCKIAN will still be sent for $2.00 a year, the old price. It will be necessary though to adhere rigidly to the cash system, since more than $1.00 must be paid in advance for the paper upon which we print 156 papers and the cost of printing leaves but little profit out of the second dollar. We are asking our old subscribers to stand by us in this crisis by renewing promptly.

All papers not paid for will be Stopped.
Don't Let Yours Stop.

The Price Will be the same $2.00 a Year

KILLS PAIN

RIVER HIGH

Out Of Its Banks Yesterday Morning and Above Second Street Bridge.

The heavy rain that continued for more than twenty-four hours, with only slight intermissions, put the river out of its banks by yesterday morning. The Second Street bridge was entirely covered except the railings, and the North Main Street bridge was cut off on the north side by a flow of water around the bridge, overflowing the entrance to the Cemetery. It began falling after daylight and receded rapidly. The rainfall was the heaviest in one day for many months. It has made the dirt roads almost impassible.

CASE OF SMALLPOX.

Mr. Wm. L. Walden, who had been ill for a week, was reported by the city health officer, Dr. J. W. Harned, to have a mild case of smallpox. A quarantine was established at his own rooms, in a Main street apartment house, in the absence of an eruptive hospital. Mrs. Walden is with him. It is not believed the disease will spread. It is not known how he contracted it, as there have been no other cases here.

"Baby" Flatiron More Than a Toy. A "baby" flatiron weighing exactly one pound not only provides the "little mothers" with an incentive to indulge in industry at an early age, but it is useful for light pressing and lingerie, faces and handkerchiefs. The iron is very useful for traveling, because of its light weight and its compactness. It operates on less than 130 volts, and is equipped with connector plugs and six feet of maroon cord.

BUCK BRAND OVERALLS CO

Will Be Located In The Second Story of Forbes Office Building.

W. R. Wheeler & Co., have agreed to rent the upper story of their building, the Forbes office building, to the Buck Brand Overalls Co., which will soon establish its plant here. The location is an excellent one from every standpoint. As a work room it will be all that could be desired, and the location is in the heart of the business district.

It is not uncommon for people to make duties of their inclinations, and to take great credit for the self-denial with which they gratify themselves.

ST. PATRICK'S LUNCHEON.

The opportunities to express originality are many in celebrating St. Patrick's day. One may express good taste with inexpensive material by studying the old traditions which play an important part in the history of the day. Gilt harps with Killarney roses may be used as decorations. Small green hats filled with green and white mints, green candles, green shamrocks for place cards, and joke favors of various wrigly spiders and snakes may be used in appropriate boxes. Small pots of shamrock may be used as top to the ice cream, served in small flower pots, wax paper lined.

The menu may consist of a variety of good things, depending upon the pocketbook, time to be spent in preparation and one's taste.

For a beginning salmon canape or any kind desired, served on toast, cut in the form of the shamrock.

Salmon mixed with salad dressing, spread over the buttered toast, then sprinkled so generously over the fish that it makes a solid green color. Use cress or parsley stems for the stem of the shamrock.

Creamed chicken may be served in small croustades of bread, with the edges decorated with finely minced green peppers, or cress may be used, if the pepper is served in some other dish.

Watercress salad cannot be improved upon for a simple with French dressing.

Shamrock Salad.—Mix cream with cream cheese to the consistency to mold, add seasonings of salt and red pepper and press this into green peppers that have been cut off at the stem end with seeds and white membranes removed. If one is careful about choosing the shapely peppers, when sliced in half-inch slices they are shaped like a shamrock with the edge of green, making a most attractive cheese or salad. Serve as a salad with mayonnaise and garnish with a radish tulip if desired.

Butter rolled in chopped parsley, small cakes decorated with pistachio nuts; ice cream or ices served colored green, will all carry out the color scheme.

GEORGIA'S VENTURE

By IZOLA FORRESTER.

When Georgia rented the Sinclair house and took a lease on the little old Buxton Inn down by the postroad, Arburndale lifted its lorgnette, so to speak, in marked disapproval.

In the first place, if one must be straitened in circumstances, there was really no need of advertising the fact. She might have stayed on at the great old mansion on the hill road and done something that was—well, unobtrusive and genteel, if she had to increase her income. Mrs. Dorian tried to make her see this, and Georgia only pushed back her thick brown hair and laughed.

"But there wasn't any income to increase," she laughed. "All at once and nothing first, don't you know, Mrs. Dorian, like the one-hoss shay. Dad's lawyers just wrote from New York that the railroad had gone into the hands of a receiver, and, of course, all of his money went with it. They may reorganize, but it will take time. And, meanwhile, we've got to live whether Arburndale approves or not."

"And what does Malcolm say?" queried Mrs. Dorian.

Georgia looked down the lovely stretch of country road, all fresh with spring blossoms and bright warm greens. She had rather left Malcolm out of the calculations. Malcolm belonged to the realm of the big house on the hill, and the Country club and affluence.

"He doesn't know," she answered. "But you were engaged, weren't you, Georgia? At least it was always understood—"

"No," said Georgia, quite gently. "We were never really engaged, Mrs. Dorian. We were just good friends always. I hope the little inn won't spoil that."

Malcolm did not hear of the inn or Georgia's venture for nearly a month; not until his return South. Then, the first night of his arrival he missed her at the Country club dance and asked for her.

"Well, you know, it's Georgia's own fault that she was dropped," said Frances Marbury, with lifted eyebrows. "Oh, she wasn't really dropped. I don't mean that, but she went into business, you see, sort of trade, keeping a little inn down on the post road, and Mrs. Dorian tried to get the house committee to ignore it, but they took it up. Mrs. Elliston is on it, and simply said it would never do. So Georgia sent in her resignation."

"Good Lord," ejaculated Malcolm. "General Farrington's granddaughter and old Langdon Sinclair's daughter."

"Just what we all said. It's terrible, isn't it?"

"Terrible for Arburndale and the Country club," answered Malcolm, grimly. "The prim idiots."

The following day he rode down to see the mistress of the inn. She looked very sweet and charming in her little private sitting room across the hall from the long, narrow dining room.

"Why on earth didn't you let me know?"

"I don't know; there wasn't anything to do. Dad just gave up when the railroad went to smash. Aunt Anne says he's better since she took him up to the springs. And I do enjoy this, Malcolm, only—" she hesitated, and laughed, "have you heard about the Country club? That was the first whack they gave me."

Malcolm rode back with grim determination in his heart. A telegram went speeding north to his lawyers to dig up the railroad case, and see where the Sinclair stock stood. Then he went to his mother, Margaret Joscelyn, who had swayed society affairs up at the capital in her younger days, and was still the most admired and exclusive person in the county, in spite of her invalidism. He told her all about Georgia, all that her happiness meant to him.

"I love her and am going to marry her, mother, and I want you to manage the rest. Will you?"

"Dear lad, of course," she said, tenderly.

The following week Arburndale knew that Mrs. Joscelyn had driven down to the inn and had drunk tea with its mistress out on the cool little veranda in full view of the post road and passersby. The next shot out of a clear sky was the announcement of a select dance given by Mrs. Joscelyn at the Country club in Miss Sinclair's honor. And Mrs. Elliston and several other members were not invited. But Malcolm smiled as he led Georgia out into the cool sweetness of the moonlit walks.

"Well, it was a campaign, wasn't it?" he said happily. "Mother enjoyed it, too."

"You've been wonderful to me," Georgia said, with a little sigh. "I suppose it does matter, but I didn't mind. She's giving a luncheon next week, too, did you know?"

Malcolm nodded his head and lifted her hand in his.

"To announce our engagement, dear," he said gently. "I've heard from the lawyers, and it's all right for Mr. Sinclair. The old stockholders are to hand in their stock and receive the equivalent in the new company. We are engaged, aren't we, Georgia?"

Georgia lifted her lashes, her dark eyes full of happiness, and amusement, too.

"What will I do with the inn, Malcolm?"

"Keep it, dear, as a souvenir of your independence."

BRICK HOUSE IS DESTROYED

Flames Consume Residence, Near Julien, Built Before War.

The old Brick residence near Julien, known as the Rossington place, and owned by Mr. G. H. Stowe, was destroyed by fire one day last week, causing a loss of several hundred dollars. The house was built before the civil war and was one of the oldest buildings in that section. It is not known how the flames originated. A family was moving into the house and had gotten in some of the furniture when the fire was discovered.

Had Worked Hard.

Elizabeth, aged four, is very fond of a young woman who lives across the street from her grandmother. One Saturday she had coaxed all day to be allowed to go over, but her grandmother said, "No, they are busy over there, and don't want you." Finally, late in the afternoon, a member of the family across the street called her to come over and get a toy belonging to her. When she was safely in the house she drew a long breath and exclaimed, "Gracious, I've worked hard all day to get over here!"

Wampum Beads.

Wampum beads were made from a variety of different substances, but the one that was used in the greatest numbers was the ordinary hard clam or quahog, which is found from Cape Cod to Florida. Roger Williams, writing of the eastern Indians, states that they "store up shells in summer against winter, whereof they make their money."

MARRIAGES.

Orten-Hefflin.

A marriage license was issued Saturday to Roy Orten and Miss Hazel Hefflin, young folks of North Christian, and the wedding is scheduled for tomorrow, at Esq. F. L. Hamby's. The groom-to-be is a son of Mr. J. D. Orten. Miss Hefflin is a daughter of Mr. C. F. Hefflin.

Bullard-Higgins.

At an announcement tea Friday afternoon, at the beautiful home of the future bride's uncle, Mr. E. H. Higgins, formal announcement was made of the engagement and approaching marriage of Miss Nora Elizabeth Higgins to Mr. Gano H. Bullard. The wedding will be in the near future. The house decorations were beautiful and delicious refreshments were served. The bride-to-be is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Higgins and is an exceptionally bright and lovable girl, who is very popular with a wide circle of friends. She graduated with honors from the City High School a few years ago and has filled official positions in the offices of City Tax collector, City Clerk and County Sheriff. Mr. Bullard is a popular young merchant doing business in the Rex Theatre building.

Mountain Teacher Shot.

Wilburn Taylor, deputy Sheriff of Harlan county, was dangerously shot Saturday afternoon near his home in Layman, Ky., when he attempted to arrest two men who were drinking. He was shot almost to pieces, being hit nine times. One of his adversaries was also wounded. Mr. Taylor is one of the most prominent mountain school teachers, having been offered some of the best schools of the country. His recovery is very uncertain, the doctors say.

Miss Margaret Ruffin, of Memphis, has joined the navy as a "yeoman," or clerk.

NO KISSING IN JAP MOVIES

Oriental Censors Bar All Osculation Scenes In Films.

"Romeo and Juliet" (Flickerfilm Company)—Cutout kissing in balcony scene; reduce throwing kiss to flash; very detrimental to public safety and morals.

Such is the heartless verdict of the Japanese movie censor on the job, from whose word there is no appeal. His scissors are ever working their jaws, alert for swooping down upon such lawless photoplay subjects as the commission of a murder, the robbery of a bank or the methods of counterfeiters. But when he sees scenes depicting kissing—"Togo, bring out the two-edged Samurai sword of our ancestors."

The police censors of Tokio are kept busy deleting kissing scenes from American made films, according to T. Maruyama, director of public safety, Tokio metropolitan police bureau.

"In Japan public kissing is considered extremely shocking and degrading and cannot be tolerated for a minute in the films," the Tokio police officials said at the Congress Hotel. "American made pictures favor kissing scenes, many of which you call 'close ups.' There is no appeal from the ruling of the Japanese censor, who also has supervision over newspapers and magazines."

Germany's submarines cost about $250,000 each and carry crews of 30 men. England caught many of them in nets, many have been sunk in action, but only Germany knows the number that left home and never came back.

Apricots dried are more valuable as a food than in the fresh stage, the water is evaporated and sugar is added making a more concentrated food with all the aroma, flavor and color still present.

Dried apricots stewed and put through a sieve, using sugar and cream, a pinch of salt, then frozen, makes a most dainty ice cream of delicious flavor.

Apricot shortcake is the ordinary shortcake served with stewed apricots and the sauce thickened slightly, with a little butter added for richness.

Raisin Pie de Luxe.—Stew together a cupful of seeded raisins and a quarter of a cupful of currants (dried) in a pint of apricot juice. Add three tablespoonfuls of butter and two egg yolks and a tablespoonful or two of lemon juice, sugar if needed, cook slightly. Put into a shell, previously baked, cover with a meringue made with the whites of the two eggs and four tablespoonfuls of sugar.

Fifteen-Minute Pudding.—Take a cupful of flour, a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt and a teaspoonful of baking powder, sift together and add just enough rich milk to make a drop batter. Butter some cups, either custard or any pudding cups, put into each a spoonful of the drop batter, then drop in two or three apricots with a tablespoonful of the juice, add another spoonful of the dough on top, then put into a pan of boiling water to steam, allowing the cups to set in the water, not too deep, as the water will boil into the cups. Cover tightly and cook 15 minutes. Serve with whipped cream with a few chopped apricots stirred into it.

Apricot dumplings may be made as one does apple dumplings: roll two or three pieces of the fruit in a square of biscuit dough, cover the dumplings with the apricot juice with bits of butter and bake for a half hour in a hot oven.

A coffee cake is made quite fancy by rows of stewed apricots placed on top just before it goes into the oven. Such a cake may be served hot with a sauce for a dessert if so desired.

LOVE IS BLIND

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

"What is the matter, Gloria?" asked Dick anxiously.

She looked at him pensively a moment, then answered, "I was just wondering if I do really love you better than anyone else in the world."

He was silent a minute, then, "Don't you think," he said slowly, "that you'd better decide pretty soon, dear. The invitations are out for our wedding and we've already received some presents."

She nodded gravely. "I haven't forgotten Dickie. Only I was thinking that after we were married what if I should meet some one I liked better than you? Wouldn't it be terrible?"

"It would!"

"You see, Dick, I got to thinking today. I've been out of school but a few months and I've known only a few men. Of course, dear, you were the only man in the world for me from the first, but after all, how do I know that you are the only man for me? I might think so and then when it's too late find there's some one else."

Dick shivered. "This is horrible, Gloria. Are you sure you feel quite well? You've had too much worry and fussing over your trousseau and it's got on your nerves."

But Gloria was firm. "It isn't just a fancy, Dickie dear. I'm sure it will come out all right and I'm positive I could never care for anyone but you—you're so—so darling, but I want to make sure and I have a plan that will set things right, I know, if every one will only agree to it."

"What is it?" anxiously.

"For mother to take me away somewhere for two weeks where I'll meet oceans of people so I can look them over. Then I'll know, dear, when I see all those other men that no one is so splendid as my own Dick. Don't you think it's a good plan?"

"No, I don't," he declared instantly.

Gloria's mother looked astonished but finally agreed. "I believe it's just what the child needs," she admitted.

But Dick, when he heard it, went through terrible torments and racked his brains for a preventative or cure. Then he thought of something, of college days when he was a star performer of the Mask and Wig club and he smiled wisely.

"We'll mix things up a bit," said Gloria's mother. "Some land, some sea, and a few other things thrown in. Baltimore first, then down the bay to Old Point, and across the Roads to Norfolk. After that it will probably be Boston by boat then to Albany by rail and down the Hudson to New York."

Gloria was in high spirits when, after a day of shopping in Baltimore, they took a taxi to the docks and got on their boat.

It was then that the stranger put in an appearance. He was about Dick's height and build and had eyes not unlike Gloria's, but he also had a manner, and a mustache, and a way of brushing his smooth black hair that was most distinguished.

When Gloria first saw him walking across the salon with the air of a nobleman, she instantly compared him with Dick, to the detriment of her beloved's independent stride and his rebellious thatch of curly brown locks.

To her surprise and joy she found the splendid looking stranger next to her at dinner and in a few minutes they were talking.

From that time on he scarcely left Gloria's side. That evening on the boat they sat up until midnight watching the moon and stars and talking of many things. Mr. Tavenner had been everywhere and knew many interesting people and things, as he had said. She must try to remember them all to tell Dick. Dick was quiet and uninclined to talk—how she wished he could be entertaining like this.

The next morning he left the boat with them, saw that they got the right car to Old Point Comfort, relieved Mrs. Haworth of the annoyance of her luggage and engaged rooms. He took them over the fort, having procured special permission, showed them over a battleship, escorted them back to their boat, and thereafter during the trip while Gloria's mother was unable to leave her cabin most of the way to Boston he took very excellent care of the bride-elect.

And then there was Boston itself, where he showed them around for two days, and after that he was even persuaded to go as far as Albany. But instead of taking the boat to New York he bade them a reluctant good-bye and disappeared.

Dick met the travelers at the station.

"Well, dearest," he asked Gloria when they were alone, "did you meet anyone you can care for more than me?"

"No, dear, I didn't, but there was one man who was lovely to me all through the trip, and do you know, I had a feeling that if it hadn't been for you I should have chosen him for my husband. In some way he reminded me very much of you—I never could quite explain it, for he was very distinguished and knew such a lot of things, innocently."

"Thank you!"

"But I've quite decided, dear, that you are the only man I can ever really care about, so it's all right."

Dick kissed her fervently.

That night Dick slipped a wig and mustache into the fire. "I kept the others away at any rate," he exulted. "Who says love isn't blind?"

Did it leave you weak, low in spirits and vitality? Influenza is a catarrhal disease, and after you recover from the acute stage much of the catarrh is left. This and your weakness invite further attacks.

We all know we cannot always make ourselves well, but few perhaps realize how much we can do to keep ourselves well.—Sir John Lubbock.

LENTEN DISHES OF SALMON.

If eggs continue at their present high price, dishes of other foods will of necessity need to be served to save their cost.

Salmon is such a favorite fish and either fresh or canned is always to be found on the market.

Salmon Cups.—Chop fine the contents of a can of salmon, add to it a half cupful of soft bread crumbs, two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, one of lemon juice, two beaten eggs, salt and pepper to taste and a half cupful of rich milk. Mix until well blended, then pack in greased cups, set into a pan of water and bake until firm. Turn out and serve hot on individual dishes with white sauce.

Salmon Soup.—Cook a grated onion for ten minutes in a quart of milk. Add two tablespoonfuls each of flour and butter, cooked together; add salt and pepper and half a can of salmon. Cook ten minutes, press through a sieve and serve very hot.

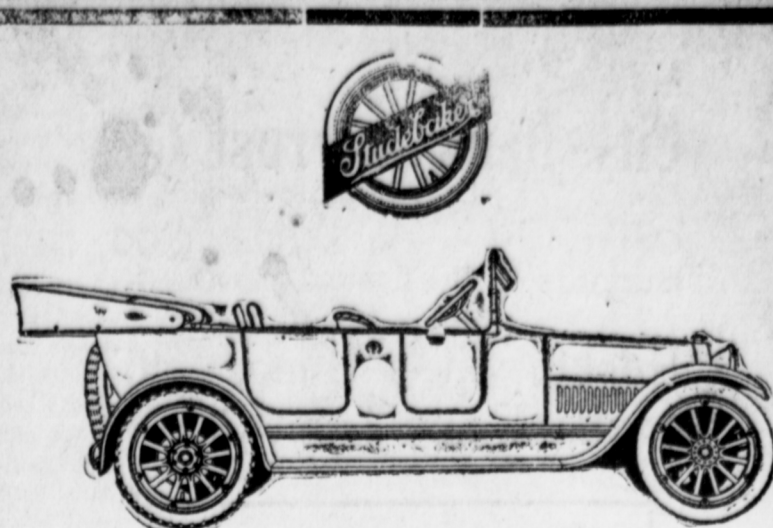

Fried Smoked Salmon.—Make a marinade of four tablespoonfuls of olive oil, two of vinegar, two cloves, a bay leaf and six pepper corns. Pour this over a pound of smoked salmon and let stand for several hours. Then fry the slices in a good salad oil and serve at once, garnished with slices of lemon.

Salmon Souffle.—Flake a can of salmon, add to it the well beaten yolks of three eggs, a half cupful of bread crumbs which have been soaked in warm milk, salt, pepper and a little lemon juice. Beat the whites of the eggs until stiff, then fold them into the mixture. Bake in a moderate oven in a buttered dish set in hot water.

Scalloped Salmon With Peas.—If canned peas are used drain them from the liquor, put a layer of salmon free from skin and bones, with a cupful of bread crumbs and two cupfuls of thin white sauce in layers with the peas and white sauce, using the crumbs buttered to cover the top. Bake until the crumbs are brown.

Potatoes may be used in place of peas. Salmon made into a loaf and steamed, then garnished with cooked peas with a sauce, makes another delicious and nourishing dish of peas with salmon.

Things You Forget.

The Studebaker Series "18" car is an evolution and perfected piece of mechanism. That is why you can FORGET many little things about Studebaker that you have to REMEMBER and care for on other cars not so highly developed.

For instance: the cooling system of the Studebaker car will work in any climate, at any temperature, providing you keep water in the radiator.

The lubrication system of a Studebaker car will work unfailingly in absolutely all conditions if you will remember to put oil in the crank case occasionally.

The electric lights, and the electric starter will never fail you if a little distilled water is put in the battery from time to time.

You will not have to paint the body frequently to keep it looking nice, because Studebaker's finishing work is the sum of years experience.

You won't have to renew the leather on the cushions, because experience has taught Studebaker how to select and buy the highest quality of leather.

You won't need to worry about making a grade with a Studebaker car, because the Studebaker motor has been perfected into the most powerful motor in the world in ratio to gasoline consumption.

These are the things that make it a delight to own and run a Studebaker car, and cause you to say "I never have any trouble with it."

The ORDEAL

By
GENEVIEVE ULMAR

(Copyright, 1917, by W. G. Chapman.)

"He asked me to marry him," spoke Greta Wilder, and dreading her cousin, Madge Boyce, regarded her with mingled mystery and surprise. "And you told him, 'no'?" "Yes," voiced Greta, half audibly. "And you mean 'yes'?" softly intimated Madge.

"Yes, I did, and I'm sorry for it!" burst forth Greta unrestrainedly. "And I love him, oh Madge! so dearly, and always have."

"Then why—"

But Greta had broken down utterly. She had buried her face on the shoulder of her confidante and was sobbing as though her heart would break.

"Well, I declare!" murmured Miss Boyce, older and, therefore, wiser than Greta and half guessing at the truth.

This came out in detail, as Greta partially recovered her composure. She had a friend, girl chum, as her visiting friend knew—Norma Earle. Well then, she had confessed her preference to Norma in a letter and had told her that she was sure that Wade Griscorn was on the verge of a proposal. Norma had written her in reply, giving advice. It was to the effect that no girl should let a man think she was to be easily won. Therefore, "keep him on the string and try him out."

"And so, I followed her advice," mourned Greta, "and the strange way that Mr. Griscorn acted hunts me. We were interrupted by brother Ned coming on the scene, but Mr. Griscorn just chuckled. He looked at me so strangely! Do you suppose," questioned Greta anxiously, "that my refusal has driven him mad? He went right away so queerly. Maybe it was a blow he could not bear. I may have broken his heart and driven him to despair and suicide."

"Don't be foolish, Greta," soothed her sensible cousin. "Only, I am surprised to see you following the advice of the most heartless coquette and flirt in all your list of acquaintances." Greta seemed the better for some sound, practical counsel from her cousin, but towards dusk she coaxed her to take a stroll. Madge did not reveal the fact that she was sure Greta was hoping to meet Wade Griscorn. Which was true. Madge had never seen Griscorn, nor did she know that as they cut across a vacant space it was near a house where Griscorn lived. An upper window was open and the apartment was flooded with light. Greta uttered a subdued cry and Madge had to quite catch her in her arms to support her.

"Why, Greta!" she exclaimed, and then her eyes fell upon a picture in the room. Near the window sat a man. He was really looking into a mirror, but the girls did not observe this. To all appearances he was lost in sad and dreary reflection. His face was ashen, deep rings showed about the eyes. His whole presentment was that of a prematurely aged young man though sickness or sorrow, broken down and hopeless.

Almost hysterical Greta fairly pulled her companion out of range of the house. She hurried her homeward, incoherently sobbing out her grief.

"That was Mr. Griscorn," she imparted, in tears, to her companion, "but oh! how changed. Can't you see I've given my poor dear love his death blow? He has changed to a decrepit old man within a few hours. How shall I ever forgive myself!"

"This won't do, Greta," censured Madge firmly. "Now, my dear, you try and compose yourself."

"But he, Wade, he may die!" whimpered poor stricken Greta.

"I'll see what I can do," promised Madge. "You can hardly expect me to go direct to the afflicted young man, but I will find out what I can."

Madge was gone for an hour. She found Greta anxiously twisting her hands in nervous anxiety upon her return.

"Did—did you see him?" questioned Greta breathlessly.

"No, Greta, for he had left the house. I learned that."

"Perhaps to leave for some far solitude, where he can forget all my cruel treatment!" wailed Greta.

"Scarcely," replied Miss Boyce. "From what I could gather he has gone to a theatrical entertainment at the next town."

Greta looked blank. It could not be possible! A man in his despairing condition thinking of pleasure! Oh! Madge must be mistaken, but Madge was positive and finally persuaded Greta to think that matters were not as desperate as she fancied. At all events she succeeded in quieting down her hysterical companion.

Greta slept but little that night. She was wretched all of the next morning. In the afternoon she went down the street. Turning a corner she came face to face with Wade. She stood rooted, her face one void of indescribable amazement.

Wade was with a friend. He was all smiles, almost jovial, conversing with his companion. He lifted his hat to Greta, excused himself to his friend and came straight up to Greta. Never had he looked so brisk, so handsome. The sunken eyes, the hollow cheeks, the dying invalid conditions were gone. What the mystery?

"Did you wish to see me, Miss Wilder?" questioned Wade pleasantly. "You stopped, and I am delighted to think it was to speak to me."

Greta stammered, flushed, paled, became dreadfully embarrassed.

"Was—that is—I presume you enjoyed the theatrical entertainment at Woodville last evening," she finally managed to articulate coherently.

"Oh, you know that?" he spoke, and laughed cheerily. "Yes, indeed! They gave me quite an ovation. I doubt if I deserved it."

"An ovation?" repeated Greta vaguely.

"It was that. You know, it was an amateur function. I played the old man. Made up at home, and quite startled my usual friends with my haggard appearance. Why, Miss Wilder! are you ill?"

Greta had moved quite unsteadily. In a shock she comprehended. The transition of old age was explained. Rouge and dyes were accountable for it. Oh, never should he know that she had witnessed the transformation, nor her sufferings!

"I—I felt slightly dizzy," stammered Greta and then she thrilled, for he had stepped nearer to her and his eyes were earnest and longing.

"Miss Wilder," he said, "I have a confession to make. When you refused me yesterday we were interrupted before I could explain my manifestation of grief."

"Glee!" murmured Greta faintly.

"Just that, for it was just $3 much nearer to my second proposal, which I wish to make now. You see, I picked up a letter on the street which you must have lost. It was from Miss Earle. I read its substance before I guessed what it was."

"Oh! how could you—I mean, how could I be so careless as to lose it." "But think of the hope, the joy, the delicious happiness with which it inspired me," dilated Wade extravagantly.

Greta was trembling all over. She fluttered closer to him unconsciously.

"So what did I find going through the program of your lady friend when I knew that perseverance would bring its own reward."

"You are very hopeful, aren't you?" challenged Greta rallying slightly.

"Do you bid me despair then?" submitted Wade.

She bowed her head to hide them from the glad eyes too full of ardent love and truth.

Prosperity in Japan.

Japan may be regarded as one of the most prosperous countries in the world. Her chemical industry is flourishing, and she has large orders for cotton, while her flour milling industry is very prosperous. In addition she has made immense sales of munitions, chiefly to Russia. It is not too much to say that Japan's expansion in the cotton and shipping industry will place her in a position for severe competition in all Pacific markets in the future; and this competition is backed by government support in every form and a business personnel keenly alive to special and national interests. Industrially she has no trade unions to contend with and the artisan population is absolutely in the hands of employers. Strikes are seldom heard of and wages are low.

Double-Barreled Revenge.

Wilkinson was near the exploding point when his neighbor met him in the street.

"That man Potter," he burst out, "has more cheek than anybody I ever met."

"Why, what has he done?" asked the neighbor.

"He came over to my house last night and borrowed a gun to kill a dog that kept him awake at night."

"Well, what of that?"

"What of that?" shouted Wilkinson. "It was my dog."

New Ways of Sterilizing Soil.

Sterilization of soil by steam, formerly so much practiced in eastern greenhouses and to some extent in California, has been given up as inefficient and also too expensive in the process. Soil drenches of formalin and commercial mixtures are now the practice. For home use in the seed boxes for delicate seeds the baking of soil in an oven insures purity.

KNOW ONE WAY TO GET MEAT

In Greenwich, R. I., the High Cost of Beef Causes No Concern to the Residents.

The residents of Greenwich, R. I., who can, as a class, shoot excellently and who have the further advantage of scenting a game warden when he is ten miles away, have no complaint regarding the high price of meats at this time, says the New York Herald. Deer steaks are plentiful enough and so far as any alleged beef combination is concerned there is not the slightest resentment.

The deer slip over into that section as a result of the free shooting laws of Connecticut. In Rhode Island they are protected; but many an old stag or a young buck has learned of late that the laws of Connecticut are no more unfortunate than the appetites of Rhode Island. The supply of meat is plentiful, as has been said before.

Anyone familiar with the habits of deer knows that they like no food better than the twigs of young apple and peach trees. Well, Greenwich is the place where they can get them, for the farmers have been doing nothing but plant and shoot for five weeks. The game wardens are present, but there is a supply of deer meat in the section already which makes the work of a game warden almost needless. No one cares for any more meat; no one cares for the price of it. The meat situation has been settled once and for all by those who know just how to settle it.

In Turkey, a man doesn't see his wife's face until after they are married.

Well, perhaps that explains why harems are so popular in that country.

WAR ON ANIMALS.

During the last fiscal year hunters in the employ of the biological survey of the department of agriculture have shot, trapped and poisoned over 11,000 coyotes, following depredations of these and other animals accompanied by outbreaks of rabies among them in parts of Oregon, California, Nevada, Idaho and Utah. Altogether over 15,000 noxious animals, including wolves, coyotes, mountain lions and bobcats were destroyed. The seriousness of the outbreaks of rabies will be realized when it is stated that more than 60 persons were treated by state authorities of Nevada during the year on account of having been bitten by either wild or domestic animals. The loss of live stock has been very heavy. At Winnemucca, Nev., a single rabid coyote caused the loss of 27 steers.

"I thought you said you were too proud to fight?"

"Yes. But a man shouldn't be governed by pride. Sometimes he must show humility in a spirit of uncompromising belligerency."

RUSSIA'S NEW PACIFIC PORT

Harbor at the Mouth of Great Amur River Means Much to Commerce of the Empire.

Russia has recently opened a new Pacific terminus for its great trans-Siberian railway and thereby hopes to relieve the congestion of shipping which has overwhelmed Vladivostok since the war began. The new port is Nikolaievsk on the Gulf of Tartary, at the mouth of the Great Amur river, and about 850 miles north of Vladivostok. Freight received at the new terminus will be sent up the river for some distance and then transferred to a branch railway which connects with the transcontinental line. The immense task of double-tracking the trans-Siberian railway was begun several years ago, but when the war broke out large additional forces were put to work to complete that undertaking. Now that the double-tracking is finished and the new port is open, it is expected that the volume of supplies which will be shipped from Japan and the United States to the Russian fronts will be greatly increased, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Until now the wharves and warehouses have been piled high with goods, which Vladivostok could not handle fast enough.

AWOKE SLEEPER IN HURRY

Sailor's Little Joke Probably Was Not Appreciated at Its Full Worth by the Victim.

Many years ago two sailors were one Sunday sitting in the gallery of an old country church, paying great attention to the service.

During the sermon one of them heard a distinct sound of snoring come up from the body of the church, and looking down he saw a fat old farmer fast asleep, his head thrown well back and his mouth wide open.

The temptation was too strong for Jack, who, making a plug of tobacco, shut one eye and, glancing along an imaginary plumb line, dropped it into the sleeper's mouth, causing the old fellow to close it with a snap and jump to his feet, sputtering and spluttering, with a face almost purple.

Confusion reigned supreme, and Jack's chum innocently asked:

"What's up, Jack—man overboard?"

"No," said Jack, with suppressed laughter; "I dropped a bit of 'baccy plumb down the main hatchway and into his old grog tub."—London Mail.

POWERFUL AIR MACHINES.

It is announced by the officials of an American airplane manufacturing company that orders have been placed by the allied governments for 11 huge battleplanes of most modern design. Each airplane will weigh in the neighborhood of 30,000 pounds, and the framework will be entirely of steel. It is said that the wing spread is to be 180 feet, while the length of the airplane from tail to propellers will be 104 feet. The framework will be constructed on the cantilever truss principle, insuring great strength with a minimum weight. Twin bodies will be used, each body carrying an engine of 800 horse power. It is planned to arm the machines with four guns, two fore and two aft, of a caliber of between one and one-half and two inches, and capable of firing 20 to 40 shots a minute. Each airship will carry a number of bombs of any size up to 14 inches in diameter. The specifications call for a speed of 85 miles an hour with full load and a crew of six men.

LABORIOUS PROCESSES.

"Do you believe that George Washington never told a lie?"

"I have my doubts about it," replied Senator Sorghum. "I am sure he did his best. But when you consider that it takes an investigating committee months to find out the truth, you couldn't expect even Washington to ascertain it and express it offhand."

MRS. H. H. REYNOLDS

Noble Christian Woman Died Saturday Morning.

Mrs. Harriet H. Reynolds, aged 68, died at the home of Mrs. Mollie Wall, on Virginia street, Saturday morning. She was the widow of the late Carter Reynolds, a prominent farmer who formerly lived on the Cadiz road. She was a member of the Shiloh Methodist church and was a devout and consistent christian. She suffered a stroke of paralysis two weeks ago. She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Frances Cox and Mrs. Albert C. Cox, and two sons, E. H. Reynolds, of this county, and John Reynolds, of California. Funeral services were held at Mrs. Wall's Sunday afternoon and the interment was in Riverside Cemetery.

Some of the Republican papers are raising a vigorous protest because Gen. Leonard Wood has been transferred from New York to Charleston. Gen. Wood did not win the choicest of army positions by any especial merit. He was a surgeon in the army 20 years ago, if we remember correctly, and became a protege of Col. Roosevelt, who gave him a command when he became President and jumped him over hundreds of regular army men until finally he was placed at New York. There is no reason why President Wilson should not use his own judgment in army matters in times like these. It behooves him to get the best men he can find.

PRESSING HIS SUIT

By SYLVIA TURNER.

The telegram arrived about half an hour after Fleming had sent out his suit to be pressed. It was quarter of nine then. He had figured on a quiet evening at the hotel, going over his new list of prospective customers for the firm and starting out early in the morning fit and groomed for the fray. The wire was so like Caroline.

"Arrive 10:22 p. m., Grand Central. Evelyn also. Meet."

One of the charms of having an elder married sister was this unexpectedness of her calls on one. And by slipping in that bit about Evelyn Granger, she had clinched the matter. She knew that the only thing which could really stir him to definite and swift action was the chance of seeing Evelyn. Yet it was now after nine, and he wore a suit of pajamas.

The boy who answered his prolonged ring was dense. The one who had taken his suit was off duty for the night. This one didn't know where the other had taken the suit to be pressed. Anyway, all the tailoring places were closed now. Fleming stared down at him with deadly fascination, as the boy made manifest the hopelessness of the situation.

He could go to bed. He would have a heavy cold, quick congestion, anything that necessitated great caution. He called up the office and ordered some hasty drugs to make a showing with. He took the heavy white blankets from the bed and piled the pillows on the couch, drew the small stand near and arranged his bottles around temptingly. Then as 10:30 drew near, and he knew it was time for their arrival, he stretched out under the covers, after phoning the clerk at the desk to tell Mrs. Henry Hardy, his sister, when she arrived, that he was ill and to reserve the best suite for her and Miss Granger.

Caroline received the message in blank amazement.

"Is he very ill?" Mrs. Hardy asked.

The clerk was inclined to the opinion that he was. His tone had been feverish and slightly delirious over the telephone. He was just about to send the hotel physician up.

"Oh, by all means send him up," Caroline exclaimed. "Pneumonia is just everywhere now. Perhaps I should call up Doctor Hazelhurst, too. He is a wonderful specialist, Evelyn. You know what he did for Uncle Charles. I think I will."

Evelyn waited anxiously while Doctor Hazelhurst was summoned.

"Oh, yes, I got him. He's coming up at once. Let's go up, now. I don't know, Evelyn, but what I'll ask you to go with me, I'm so unstrung and upset by this. Ken wouldn't mind, and he's probably out of his head anyway."

So it happened that without being announced, save by a soft tap on the door, Fleming's guests appeared suddenly before him. He surely looked wild-eyed and stunned. Mrs. Hardy hurried to him tenderly and knelt beside him.

"Dear, dear old chap," she cried. "Don't worry one bit. It's so fortunate we came in time. Are you very ill?"

Fleming remembered his role, and said he was. He tried to avoid Evelyn's appealing eyes. She had never looked lovelier than now, in her brown broadcloth traveling gown, with a wide-brimmed hat, and a big bunch of violets at her belt. If he had had any doubt before, it was swept away by the message her eyes sent to him.

"Do you know us, Ken, dear?" Caroline begged anxiously, smoothing back his hair. "You mustn't worry one bit. I shall stay right with you and Doctor Hazelhurst is coming at once. Why don't you go to bed? There's a draft here from that transom?"

She stepped into the inner bedroom to investigate, and Fleming sat up, alert and calm, very calm.

"Evelyn," he said, in a low tone. "You'll understand. I'm not ill. I've sent my only suit out to be pressed. Can't you steer this beastly specialist away from me?"

The telephone bell rang. Evelyn stepped to the wall and took the receiver down.

"Hello?" she called. "Yes? Oh, send him right up, please. Thank you so much. And—when the doctor comes tell him Mrs. Hardy will see him downstairs."

She turned with a twinkle in her eyes, a demure little smile on her lips. "It's Tucker, the bellboy," she said. "He has a parcel for you, Ken. Shall we wait for you downstairs? I'm awfully hungry. We just had a light dinner before leaving and thought you'd go out to supper with us later here at the hotel, or wherever you wanted to take us."

"In ten minutes," Fleming told her, exuberantly.

It took the full ten minutes to make adequate explanations to Caroline, likewise to the keen-eyed old doctor when he arrived. And later, when Fleming found his opportunity, it was an odd proposal of marriage he made.

"For, dear heart, it isn't just because you're the one girl in the world whom I miss; it's because you understand a fellow and have got a sense of humor. You managed the whole thing wonderfully for me, and never even blamed me once."

Evelyn turned her head to smile at him, just a long, intimate, understanding smile.

"I think it was very opportune," she answered gently. And Fleming puzzled over what she could have meant.

WYLIE-FOARD

Princeton Grocer Wins a Charming Christian Coun- ty Bride.

Mr. Joe D. Wylie, of Princeton, Ky., and Miss Margaret Foard, were married Saturday afternoon at two o'clock, at the bride's home near Church Hill, Eld. J. T. Hawkins, officiating. The Foard home was beautifully decorated with flowers and evergreens and many friends were present.

The weather man had kindly ordered an ideal spring day for this occasion and a host of friends and relatives took advantage of it and gathered at the beautiful country home of the Foards to take part in the happy affair. The house was a bower of spring flowers. The decorations, consisting with these together with large jars of roses and carnations which added attractiveness of each room. As the guests entered each one was asked to register in the wedding book—a gift of the bride's sister—then a white or pink carnation was pinned on each guest, making an attractive array of flowers for the wedding. In the parlor was seen a very artistic altar built of potted plants and cut flowers. It was lighted with candles, which shed a soft light throughout the room. A large wedding bell hung above the altar and underneath this bell stood the happy couple who here plighted their vows to each other. The bride's gown was of white organdie and lace. She wore a bridal veil, which was caught up at the sides of her face with lilies of the valley. She carried a large shower bouquet of bride's roses. The groom was dressed in the conventional black.

Masters Jessie Lee Foard and William Adams were ribbon bearers. The wedding march was played by Miss Lena Jones and during the ceremony Miss Jones also played "Meditation" softly.

The bride's going away gown was a stylish dark blue plaid silk coat suit, with hat to match. The numerous and elegant wedding gifts showed the high esteem of the young couple in this community.

The friends from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wylie, of Princeton, Ky., Mrs. Will Hammack, Miss Rosellen Foard, Mr. Walter Foard, of Allensville, and Miss M. Daisy Baskett, of Henderson, Ky.

The young couple departed at once for their home at Princeton.

The bride is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Foard, of Church Hill, and is a charming girl and a social favorite. The groom is a popular and successful merchant in the grocery business.
